The School

The Royal and Prior Comprehensive School opened in September 1971 the result of an amalgamation between two of the county's oldest secondary schools: the Royal School Raphoe and the Prior Endowed School, Lifford. The Royal School was established by charter of King James I in 1608 as part of the Ulster Royal Schools and the Prior School was founded in 1880 by the generosity of Miss Eleanor Prior.

The Royal and Prior Comprehensive School is a co-educational school for 12 to 18 years olds. There are 590 pupils in the school 33 of whom are boarders. All the students follow the Junior Certificate curriculum in their first 3 years and the Leaving Certificate Curriculum in their final 2 years. There is an optional Transition Year programme which on average involves 60% of the year group. In total there are 70 members of staff involved in all aspects of the life of the school from the office to the classroom to the canteen.

The school occupies a well maintained 30 acre site on the Derry Road just outside the town of Raphoe. The Royal School House, located behind St Eunan's Cathedral in the town, is used as accommodation for the boarders. The Royal School House is an eighteenth century three storey building that meets the needs of the boarders and has amongst other facilities: a dining room, dormitories, prep room and common room.
